

ABSTRACT

Inhaled insulin, relative to subcutaneously and/or transdermally administered insulin, can be used to reduce hepatic glucose output in fasted diabetic patients.